“ We met Marvin 20 years ago when he and Marilyn moved in as our next door neighbors in Houston. Although we only shared a property line for five years, we enjoyed countless conversations, meals, fishing trips, and laughs over that time. As I type this note I'm reminded of so many wonderful encounters in the driveway, helping each other with home projects, sharing tools, and planning outings. My memories of him are dominated by images of hard work, the ever-present "new project", sharing meals together, all accompanied by his razor sharp wit and infectious laughter. Marvin chose his friends carefully and certainly didn't suffer fools well, but once you were his friend he was all in...I consider myself fortunate to have had Marvin as my friend. We'll certainly miss him but the fond memories of our friendship will be with us always.
