“ I write this late memory of Norm due to just finding out about his passing. It wasn't unusual for a few months for us not to talk, but have been looking for him since November. Thinking his phone would start working again, I wasn't all too worried. He sounded bright and cheerful last I spoke to him, I even teased him about being careful, that GOD takes the good ones, not the onery, and that he's becoming pretty happy. In is last years Norm really enjoyed learning from Rabbi Epstein and coming closer with GOD.

Norm and I have known each other for probably 30 years or so. I supported Norm with his computer needs originally starting in Newbury Park, CA thru to his life in Texas helping him remotely and occasional trips to see him.

I am sad to have to say goodbye.

“ Norm was my dad. He was 25 when I was born. I remember a young dad. He had three more children and there is a big age gap between us. They had an older dad.

My dad was courageous. When I took up ice skating, he took up ice skating. When I started horse back riding, he started horse back riding. When I want to hike, body surf or snorkel down deep, he hiked, surfed and dove.

He loved the ocean and the sky. And so do I. I think of him whenever I'm in the ocean or teaching cosmology.

“ Norm was my big brother. As a kid I always looked up to him. He had an interest in science, which sparked an interest in science for me. And he sparked my imagination. One summer we designed a beautiful mini racer, though we never built it. Norm played football in high school. He attended IIT. He served a stint in the army, and he got his degree in accounting from Washington University in St. Louis. He worked on the Sears Tower. Norm loved Judaism. Although he had difficulty expressing his emotions sometimes, I believe deep down he loved all his family. He and I were very different in many ways, but he was my big brother, I'm saddened that life was often difficult and hard on him. I loved him, he was my brother.
